I would like to extend my thanks firstly to the CHASE doctoral training partnership who have not only funded this journal but allowed many opportunities for this issue of Brief Encounters to be published. I would particularly like to thank Steven Colburn, Rob Witts and Clare Hunt, for their invaluable support. I would also like to extend my thanks to the Academic Steering Committee for their guidance.

The publication of this issue would not have been possible without the work and effort of the editorial team who have worked on several different parts of the publication. I extend thanks to the Web Officer, Sarah Middle, who has worked tirelessly to ensure that the website and Open Journal System is always working effectively, and to Ellis Lynn Spicer, the Communications Editor, who promoted the Call for Submissions and helped me recruit the next editorial board. The journal would not be effective without academically vigorous submissions, and this would not have been possible without the determination of Chloe Trainer, the Submissions Editor, whose advise was invaluable in helping me select publications, as well as Sarah Elizabeth Marshall, the Articles Editor; Sana Goyal, the Reviews Editor; and Anna Jamieson, the Creative Encounters Editor, who each ensured the smooth-running of the peer-review and selection process.

I also extend my gratitude to Nicole Mennell and Emily Bartlett, the founding editors of the journal (and the copy editors for this issue), who have always been on hand for support and advice; Jade Lee, the Senior Editor of Issue 2, and Simon Everett, the Layout Editor, whose invaluable work has put this issue through to its publication. I would also like to thank the associate editors for their work on the journal, and my supervisor Susan Wiseman for her continuous support.

Finally, many thanks to the authors who written some excellent pieces for the journal that are rigorous, diverse, and stimulating, and which reflect the high-quality, innovative research carried out within the CHASE consortium. This project was a team effort and I am immensely thankful for having the opportunity to manage the journal and the editorial board.
