I would firstly like to thank the CHASE Doctoral Training Partnership team, and in particular Steven Colburn, Rob Witts and Clare Hunt, for their unfailing support and advice. I am also grateful for the input and guidance of the Academic Steering Committee and for Director Denise deCaires Narain's continuing support of the journal.

The production of any academic journal is always a collaborative exercise and Brief Encounters is no different. I benefitted enormously from the experience of its Founding Editors, Nicole Mennell and Emily Bartlett, who were consistently generous with their time and input. Their willingness to remain on the editorial team as Web Officer and Communications Officer ensured an invaluable continuity. Indeed, the continuing success of Brief Encounters would not be possible without the foundations laid by its Founding Editors.

Alongside Emily and Nicole, I was very fortunate to work with a highly professional and efficient Editorial Team: Chloe Trainor, Costanza Beltrami, Emily Rose, Leila Nassereldein, Simon Everett and Paul Ketley. Huge thanks are also due to our excellent Associate Editors for their high standard of peer-review, copyedit and proofread.

I am personally (and always) grateful for the support of my supervisor, Dr Kai Easton, whose unfailing support, patience and belief in me has helped make this experience so valuable to me.

Lastly, I want to thank all the authors, whose excellent, diverse and intellectually challenging pieces have truly made this issue.
